

Seven Nutrition Selects Chris Oyolokor as New CEO

Seven Nutrition announced today that Chris Oyolokor will sit as the company's first CEO. He will join Kaleb Coleman and Nick Ammons as core executives of the health company located in Austin, TX.

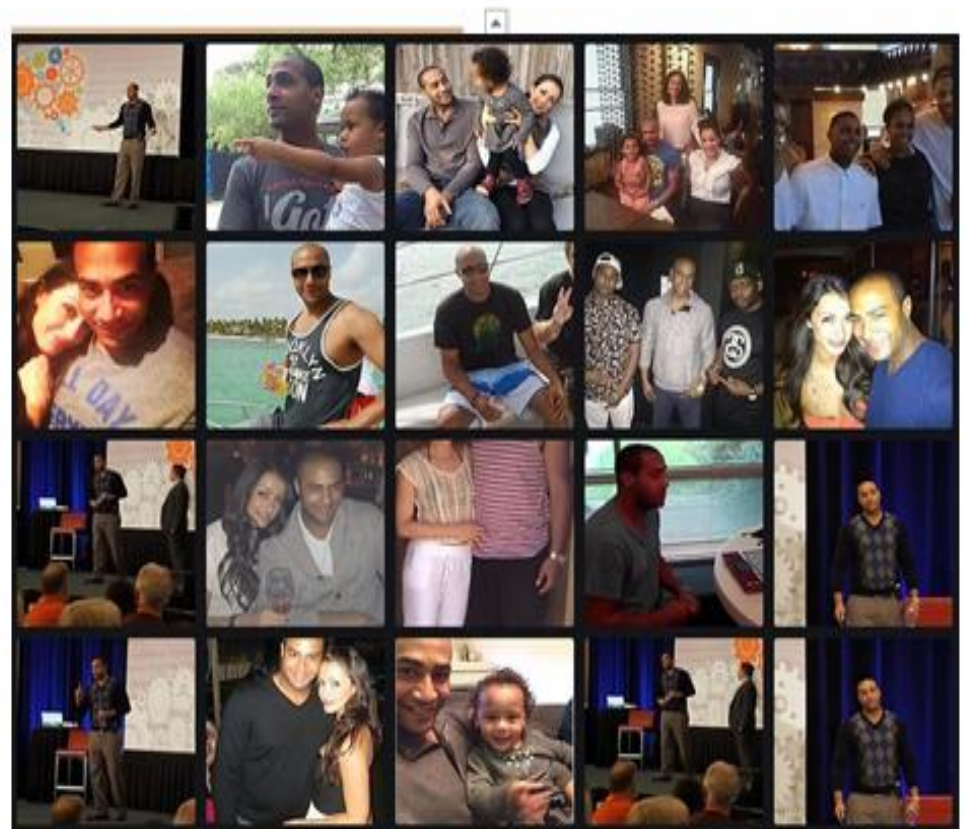

"After a quick start into the health and nutrition industry, Seven Nutrition's need for an experienced leader have become paramount to its continued growth and success," said Nick Ammons. "Chris has a track of strong leadership and unmatched talent when it comes to early stage growth of companies...!"

Christopher Oyolokor

Seven Nutrition's funding will support KBC's diverse range programs including their Transplant Center children & families support services, outreach & education. For kids suffering from leukemia, stem cell transplantation is the only cure but one which is out of reaches for many families. Kids Beating Cancer is a ray of hope for such families and it helps keep the affected families together by fighting for a cure for every child through its variety of programs.

Seven Nutrition's product line is focused on healthy living and better nutrition so it makes perfect sense for them to align as a company with KBC - an organization dedicated to fighting cancer and 80 other malignant and non-malignant diseases.

Chris Oyolokor, Seven Nutrition CEO

About Seven Nutrition

Seven Nutrition is an Austin, TX based health company that provides information, resources, and products on alternative remedies, aromatherapy, general health, nutrition, recipes and weight loss. It is headed by newly appointed CEO Chris Oyolokor, a cancer survivor himself, with Kaleb Coleman and Nick Ammons as core executives - all of whom come with a wide industry and entrepreneurial experience.

About Kids with Cancer:- For 23 years, Kids Beating Cancer has been providing resources and support for children with cancer, leukemia, and related life-threatening diseases throughout the treatment process. KBC believes that by providing the pre-transplant testing and donor identification costs, expenses never covered by Medicaid and only partially covered by insurance, any child can have access to marrow or stem cell transplantation, the best – and only hope for a cure.

Seven Nutrition Joins Hands with Kids Beating Cancer to Help the Fight against Cancer

Austin, TX (Oct 15, 2016) –

Seven Nutrition announced today that in order to extend its mission of optimal health for everyone, it has partnered with Kids Beating Cancer to provide resources and support for children with cancer and other life-threatening diseases. In wake of the newly forged agreement, Seven Nutrition will be donating a portion of its sales to Kids Beating Cancer (KBC) which will help children and their families before, during and after treatment.

"Optimal health, 7 days a week has been our company motto from the beginning and our partnership with KBC is a true reflection of this motto," said Chris Oyolokor, Seven Nutrition CEO. "Many kids suffering from leukemia and other life-threatening diseases simply do not have the resources to find a cure. We consider it our moral responsibility to play our part in helping these kids and their families."

Seven Nutrition's funding will support KBC's diverse range programs including their Transplant Center| children & families support services, outreach & education. For kids suffering from leukemia, stem cell transplantation is the only cure but one which is out of reaches for many families. Kids Beating Cancer is a ray of hope for such families and it helps keep the affected families together by fighting for a cure for every child through its variety of programs.

Seven Nutrition's product line is focused on healthy living and better nutrition so it makes perfect sense for them to align as a company with KBC - an organization dedicated to fighting cancer and 80 other malignant and non-malignant diseases.

About Seven Nutrition

Seven Nutrition is an Austin, TX based health company that provides information, resources, and products on alternative remedies, aromatherapy, general health, nutrition, recipes and weight loss. It is headed by newly appointed CEO Chris Oyolokor, a cancer survivor himself, with Kaleb Coleman and Nick Ammons as core executives - all of whom come with a wide industry and entrepreneurial experience.

About Kids with Cancer

For 23 years, Kids Beating Cancer has been providing resources and support for children with cancer, leukemia, and related life-threatening diseases throughout the treatment process. KBC believes that by providing the pre-transplant testing and donor identification costs, expenses never covered by Medicaid and only partially covered by insurance, any child can have access to marrow or stem cell transplantation, the best – and only hope for a cure.

Contact Information

Phone: 844-803-8484

Email: support@sevensnutrition.com

Thanks for Visits

